Consequences of the Fall

The Consequences of the Fall Sin distorts fraternity among humankind, as when a brother becomes a stranger and an enemy to his own brother (see Gn 4:1-16, the story about Cain and Abel). Sin introduces disorder into society, and gives rise to vain efforts to build a society without God (see Gn 11:1-9, the story of the Tower of Babel). However, the great expectations of human pride end only in great disillusionment, malaise, confusion and misunderstanding: “Skillfully you have planned to build a tower, O my soul, and to establish a stronghold for your lusts; but the Creator confounded your designs and dashed your devices to the ground.” (#156)

Consequences of the Fall

The Consequences of the Fall The universal consequences of the fall arise before us in the story of the flood (see Gn 6-9): “The Lord saw that the wickedness of humankind was great in the earth, and that every inclination of the thoughts of their hearts was only evil continually...the earth was corrupt in God’s sight, and the earth was filled with violence” (Gn 6:5,11). The raging and passion of evil inclinations that predominated among people and defined their behavior led to God’s punishment – the Flood: “You alone, my soul, have opened the windows of the wrath of your God, and you have flooded, as the earth, all your flesh and deeds and life; and you have remained outside the Ark of salvation.” (#157)
